THE BALL LOCATED.

PROF. BELL'S ELECTRIC BALANCE DEFINES ITS POSITION.

Buried in the Wall of the Abdomen 2½ Inches from the Surface—Continued Improvement in the President's Condition.

[illegible] EXECUTIVE MANSION, Aug. 1.

[illegible] A. M.—The president slept well [illegible] The [illegible] than at any time since [illegible] At the evening dressing [illegible] temperature became [illegible] conditions. He appears [illegible] satisfactorily made [illegible] progress on the road to [illegible] recovery during the last few days. His pulse [illegible] temperature 98.4, respiration 19.

[illegible] P. M.—The president's wound continues to [illegible] well. At the morning dressing it was found in all respects in satisfactory condition. After the dressing was completed his head and shoulders were raised in the same manner as yesterday and he took solid food for breakfast with more relish than he has hitherto shown. At present his pulse is 100, temperature 98.6, respiration 19.

[illegible] P. M.—The president remained with his head and shoulders elevated [illegible] for dressing his wound. It continues to progress in a satisfactory manner and discharges healthy pus freely from the deeper as well as from the superficial portions. He has taken nourishment well and in sufficient quantities, and in all respects continues to do well. The rise of temperature this afternoon was slight. At present his pulse is 104, temperature 99.[illegible], respiration 20.

[illegible] P. M.—The president's case today has no feature of especial importance which was not noticed in [illegible] bulletins. His appetite is [illegible] better than yesterday. He has partaken more freely of solid food, and his bill of fare has been extended to embrace several things heretofore forbidden, including coffee, of which he drank half a cup to-day for the first time. Surgeons continue to give him [illegible] alternately in place of equal quantity of milk. The president expresses a decided liking for it and drinks it eagerly. The wound discharged freely at the evening dressing and its appearance was in every way satisfactory. The usual afternoon fever was light and passed off earlier than usual, and the president went to sleep and has been sleeping most of the time since. His pulse is now below [illegible] temperature and respiration normal.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—At midnight the president is sleeping quietly. Dr. Bliss says he is getting well as fast as he could.

The Ball Located.

Under the supervision of attending surgeons Professors Bell and Tainter this morning made another application to the patient's body of the electrical apparatus known as the induction balance, with a view of completing the tests of Saturday, which were not entirely conclusive, and ascertaining definitely and certainly if possible the location of the ball. Professors Bell and Tainter have been almost constantly engaged for a week in experiments with the induction balance; also have made several improvements which greatly add to its efficiency. They tried this improved apparatus upon the president's body for the first time last Saturday, and although it indicated fairly the location of the ball it was afterwards found to be slightly out of adjustment and the experiment was not regarded as conclusive. The results of this morning's test, however, are entirely satisfactory both to Profs. Bell and Tainter and the attending surgeons, and it is now unanimously agreed that the location of the ball has been ascertained with reasonable exactness and certainty, and that it lies as heretofore stated in the front wall of the abdomen, immediately over the groin, about five inches below and to the right of the navel. Experiments this morning were repeated several times, and were made by Professors Bell and Tainter independently, so as to guard as far as possible against errors arising from faulty perception of a single individual, or from one person's mistaken judgment on comparative intensity of sounds. In every instance, however, when the small disks attached to the machine were placed in such a position on the patient's body as to indicate the location of the black and blue spot which appeared on the lower right side of the abdomen soon after the president was shot, the listener at the microphone says he perceived a radiance disturbance. It made no difference whether the experimenters could see the disk or not, whenever they were placed in that particular position they became instantly aware of the fact, and announced it. The experiments were varied, and continued until all were convinced that the bullet had been found, or at least located. The ball must be within two and a half inches of the surface. The surgeons don't intend to remove the ball at present.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—Prof. Bell has made a report of some length to the physicians attending President Garfield on the subject of his experiment, and the location of the ball. It does not, however, contain any new matter.

This opinion is official condemnation of Brady's method on star-route matters. The department will hereafter abandon these methods and stick to [illegible] limitations on increase.

EUROPEAN AFFAIRS.

THE IRISH LAND BILL BEFORE THE BRITISH PEERS.

Parnell Being "Named" Voluntarily Leaves the House—Crop Prospects in England, Scotland, Ireland, Etc., etc.

[illegible]

LONDON, Aug. 1.—There was a large attendance in the house of lords to-day for the second reading of the land bill. All the leaders were present [illegible] [illegible] was proposed. Earl Granville [illegible] the second reading of the bill and made a brief speech.

Lord Salisbury followed. Lord Cottingford, and was received with loud cheers by the conservatives. He moderately criticised the bill, and reviewed past legislation for Ireland. The government, he said, sought to make the report of the Richmond commission the basis for a bill, but the main point on that bill was that tenants' improvements were unchecked. According to the bill, landlords could not even select the site for cottages. He became a sort of mortgagee of his own estate, with uncertain security and a sort of head agent for a land commission, which might be hostile to the landlord's interest. Lord Salisbury [illegible] [illegible] amendments for the insertion of a clear definition for fair rent, for exemption of estates managed on the English system, and tenancies at several hundred pounds yearly [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] of leases.

The marquis of Lansdowne (liberal) said that he regarded the bill as an attempt to quell agrarian agitation by indiscriminate concession of proprietorial rights.

Lord [illegible] (conservative) strongly condemned the bill.

The Marquis of Waterford, conservative, said that the bill was one of confiscation without compensation. Touching the history of the bill, he said, showed that it was really an answer to the land league agitation. He hoped that the house would very considerably amend the bill in committee.

Lord Lytton said that the bill was a revolutionary concession to threats of rebellion and a step onward in a course that must end in either dissolution of connection between England and Ireland or civil war.

Lord president of the council moved adjournment of debate. Adjourned.

Parnell Makes a "Scene" in the Commons.

LONDON, Aug. 1.—In the commons Hartington, secretary of state for India, gave details concerning subsidies supplied the ameer of Afghanistan after his accession. He added that there was no reason to believe that the Indian government intended to afford the ameer further assistance. It had made no preparation to employ Anglo-Indian forces in Afghanistan. Parnell was "named" for offensive language and for disregarding the authority of the chair, and Gladstone moved his suspension for the remainder of the sitting. Parnell rose, and interrupting Gladstone said that he would not go through the farce of awaiting a vote, as the speaker had interfered with the freedom of discussion. He then quitted the house. Motion for his suspension was carried, 1[illegible] to 11. Parnell was named for persisting in spite of the speaker's ruling in raising the question of Irish political prisoners, and declaring that the authorities of the commons were always on the side of power. The under foreign secretary replying to Ashmead Bartlett (conservative), said that England had received no communication from the Khedive of Egypt asking for armed protection because he feared a military revolt, and the government was not aware that France had received such a request.

The marquis of Hartington said that the operations which resulted in the annexation of Akhal Turcomans were in full progress before and during our occupation of Candahar and the concluding act took place while we were still there. Ayoob Khan's success has been recognized by the government as perfectly possible and he had distinctly stated that the ameer's supremacy could only be decided after there had been a trial of strength. Lord Hartington said that he had not the smallest hesitation in saying that he did not consider that the annexation [illegible] Turcomania was a matter of indifference [illegible] majesty's government and he was ready to admit the near approach of Russia towards the borders of Afghanistan was not a matter of indifference to England. The independence and integrity of Afghanistan was of vital importance and the government had no intention of permitting any interference by any foreign power with the internal or external affairs of Afghanistan.

Parnell, leaving, said: "I call the public to witness that you, Mr. Speaker, have refused us freedom of discussion."

Gladstone said that he had never before heard such words used in the house.

On motion for going into committee of supplies, Ellis Ashmead argued that Russian annexation of Akhal Turcomania was in violation of her protests to England, and had been encouraged by the evacuation of Candahar and was a menace to the security of British India.

The Expected Sensation.

The sergeant at arms of the house has given instructions for suspension of privileges to admission orders to the lobby in connection with Bradlaugh's expected attempt to enter the house.

England and the Porte.

LONDON, Aug. 1.—The Morning Post says: We learn from Constantinople that in a conversation between the grand vizier and one of the ambassadors, the former stated that the porte was preparing a note on affairs, which would be to a certain extent an answer to a dispatch of Earl Granville, forwarded recently to Lord Dufferin, British ambassador to Turkey, which instructed the latter to advise the porte to exercise great prudence in not giving cause of just complaint to France. The note will point the danger to which Turkish provinces are exposed, and the necessity of taking immediate steps for guaranteeing order. The porte, while declaring that it will not shrink from fulfilling its duty, protests beforehand against any wrong interpretation which France may give to measures which may be deemed necessary.

Spain and France.

The reply of Minister Camacho to Barthelemy St. Hilaire's note declares that outrages on Spanish colonists in Algeria and loss of French subjects during the troubles in Spain and Cuba do not admit of analogy. In the latter case there was time for flight before colonists at Saida, Algeria, were surprised. The French government it says by omission of proper superior officers admitted that protection was insufficient. Spain consents to suggestions that France might levy contributions on the Arabs to indemnify Spaniards.

PERSONAL AND GENERAL.

Bancroft takes great care and pains with his literary work, and generally keeps the proof sheets for a long time.

It was bound to come. The claim is now made that a Boston paragrapher was born with a bullet in his liver.

Postmaster-General James is authority for the statement that the subject of civil service reform was receiving a great deal of attention from the president and his cabinet just prior to the shooting, and that the president intended to present to congress some suggestions on the subject.

The Ohio coercion teetotalers and the irredeemable greenbackers are talking of "pooling their issues," and uniting on one ticket. Only water to drink and illimitable fiat money would be a captivating campaign cry for people who believed in it.

Duke Paul, of Mecklenburg, and his cousin, the Princess Windischgratz, having been married according to Protestant rites, have asked the pope's consent to marry according to the Roman Catholic doctrine. So far his consent has not been obtained; but they do not intend to let that trouble them, as they consider themselves sufficiently wedded without it.

The spoils hunters are keen to scent danger to their system. A Washington dispatch states that: "Now that it is certain that Secretary Windom will adopt some civil service rules, remonstrances are already being received from some congressmen before it is known even what the nature of the rules will be. Some customs officials are also reported as protesting against any change that will deprive them of their patronage." It is high time this vermin-breeding system was abolished.

President Garfield and Judge Black have recently become the owners of a large farm in Alexandria county, Va., lying within view of the White House. They acquired a small portion of the tract partly by purchase and partly as a fee for services. The whole tract was mortgaged, and in order to save their part they instructed an agent to buy the whole of it in the foreclosure sale occurred. While the president has been lying ill the sale has been made and his farm secured.

John P. Bowman, of Cuttingsville, Vt., has just completed a $75,000 tomb for his wife and daughter, which is said to be one of the most magnificent structures of the kind in this country. It is in the shape of an Athenian temple, and is built of granite outside and marble inside. A life size statue of Mr. Bowman, dressed in modern style, with hat and gloves in one hand and a wreath of immortelles in the other, stands at the entrance. Looks as if Mr. Bowman was resolved to carry his wealth to the grave, if he could not carry it further.

Now is it, asks the Philadelphia Ledger of July 20, that the increasing death rate carries off so many more men than women—so many more boys than girls? Last week the death list shows 261 males to 216 females, the minors being 162 boys to 141 girls. How much of this is due to the greater exposure from masculine employments and how much to the more frequent habit of dissipation among males than females? Both causes unquestionably operate in producing the larger masculine mortality, but it would be interesting, perhaps valuable, to ascertain the proportion.

A curious illustration of the old proverb that "murder will out" is to be found in the case of the culprit Patterson, who was executed in Henry county, Mississippi, on the 22d of July. In 1868 he murdered an old man for his money. He was arrested, but broke jail, and fled to Illinois, where he remained under an assumed name until last August, when, hearing of his father's death, he wrote to [illegible] [illegible] the property left by the [illegible] [illegible] revealing his [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] left by his father [illegible] [illegible] Illinois [illegible]

Little by Little.

[illegible] said Tom one day, [illegible] [illegible] as well as they ought. [illegible] were in the garden, and the things the boy had his eye on were the currant bushes.

"I don't expect they do," replied his uncle; "I'm no great hand at a garden." "Well, sir, won't [illegible] improve?"

"I can try on the currants," said Tom. "They want to be trimmed out, the dead wood cut off and the right suckers trained. Don't you ever dig around them and put ashes on the roots?"

His uncle had never done these things, did not know that they ought to be done. He thought, he said, currants took care of themselves.

"But they can be cared for," said Tom, "and do all the better."

"Suppose you try, boy," said his uncle.

His uncle did not believe much would come of it, but he had reason to change his mind. Much did come of it. All at once it seemed to him, for time goes fast with an old man, his bushes were loaded with fruit, fine large currants, such as the garden had not seen for many a day, if ever before. People when they walked in the garden, exclaimed: "What splendid currants you have!"

"That boy knows how to take care of his gold dust," said his uncle to himself, as he sometimes did aloud.

Tom went to college, and every account they heard of him he was going ahead, laying a solid foundation for the future.

"Certainly," said his uncle, "certainly. That boy, I tell you, knows how to take care of his gold dust."

"Gold dust?" Where did he get gold dust? He was a poor boy. He had not been to California. He never was a miner. Where did he get gold dust? Ha! he has seconds and minutes and these are gold dust of time, which boys, girls and grown-up people are apt to waste and throw away. Tom knew their value. His father and minister had taught him that every speck and particle of time was worth its weight in gold, and his son took care of them as if they were. He never spent them foolishly, but only in good bargains; "for value received" were stamped on all he passed away. Take care of gold dust.

GETTING UP IN THE MORNING.

The way to get up in the morning is just to do it promptly. The moment you are called, decide at once to rise. Do not wait until mother's gentle voice is tired, and sister Lucy has determined that she will not call you again and father comes to the foot of the stairs and calls very seriously: "William! Ebenezer! Rebecca!" and you feel that you must rise in a hurry. Do not put off getting up until you can hardly take time to [illegible] buttons and [illegible] and you cannot find which strings belong to each other, and [illegible] dress snap and buttons fly off boots, and things are generally crooked. When first you rise, let your thoughts go to God in thankfulness that you are alive and well and ready to begin another day. Then wash from head to foot with a sponge and cold water, and dry yourself with a rough crash towel, or take a rub with a stiff flesh brush. You will feel quite warm and glowing after this exercise, which is the better for being rapidly performed. Dress as neatly and entirely, to the last touch of shoe polish and the last flourish of the hair-brush, that you need think no more about your dress all day. Be sure to attend to your teeth. They are good servants and have so much work to do that they deserve to be carefully looked after, not with irritating powders but with a clean brush, pure water, and occasionally a dash of white Castile soap.—Young People.

Why, mother, how bright and cheerful you look to-night! What has happened?"

"I feel very happy, my dear, because my little boy has tried to be good all day. Once, when his sister Katie teased him, and he spoke quick and cross to her, he turned round a moment after of his own accord, and said he was wrong, and asked her to forgive him. I believe I should grow young and never look tired or unhappy again if, every day, my little boy and girl were as thoughtful, unselfish and loving as they have been to-day."

Here's a grand secret for you, little one. And now that you know how to make mother happy, may you keep her always full of sunshine.

WORSHIP OF THE MOON.

What the Ancients Thought of our Planet's Satellite.

[E. F. Pratt in Popular Science Monthly for August.]

Nor is it to be marveled at when we consider that this planet was the most brilliant and changeable as well as the nearest and apparently largest celestial body that presented itself to their nightly view, and that in the clear exquisite ether of Arabian skies, and the calm nights of India and Egypt, it shone among the heavenly host with a lustre unknown to dwellers in the crowded cities of a northern clime.

But the children of these tropic lands did something more than gaze, speculate and admire with supreme patience; they reared lofty towers and grand pyramids, and invented instruments which have led up step by step to the [illegible] instruments, the micrometer, and the telescope of to-day. A college of astronomy was founded by the priesthood of Egypt, the worship of the moon growing out of their frequent use of her pictured and carved image in making their meteorological announcements to the people, as, for instance, when the Nile was about to overflow, warning heralds were sent through the streets bearing aloft the figure of the symbol of the river goddess, and a gilded figure of the moon in the phase it would present at the date of the expected rising.

In the course of time, the sentiment or was forgotten, the symbol was worshiped, and finally what it represented deified. The moon no longer appeared to the unlettered populace as merely a brilliant lamp suspended from a revolving dome, and shining until extinguished by the waters of the ocean, but now was looked upon with awe as a region of sublime mysteries.

This veneration of the moon gradually spread with population to all parts of the world. We have records of ancient Chinese [illegible] relics found among Druidical [illegible] in Western Europe, accounts of astronomical picture writings of a religious character, and lunar calendars of gold, silver [illegible] discovered in ancient temple ruins in Mexico, Central and South America.

Among the buildings devoted to lunar worship may be mentioned the wonderful temple of Diana at Ephesus, built at the combined expense of the nations of Asia, and the magnificence [illegible] of the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

THE PERIL OF FIGURES.

[N. Y. Times.]

Mr. Edward Atkinson is pre-eminently a man of figures. He bristles all over with statistics and calculations of percentages, and is able to prove whatever he pleases by his arithmetic. Lately he has been proving, in the Journal of the American Agricultural Association, some things which we suspect are not quite true. He musters a great company of figures concerning railway transportation, and drills them in files, squads, platoons, and battalions for the purpose of showing, among other things, that railway consolidation and freedom of railway management have already enriched the American people—especially the farmers—and that if left to itself, our railway system is destined to go on putting untold sums of money into the pockets of the agricultural classes.

Briefly stated, Mr. Atkinson's showing and argument on this point are as follows: During the time since 1869 or 1870, the railway traffic over one of the great trunk lines which fairly represents all of them has increased 246 per cent.; meantime the earnings of the railroad company from freight have increased in a much smaller ratio, namely, 29.2 per cent., and the transportation charge per ton per mile has during the same time decreased 57 per cent. on one division of the road and 67 per cent. on the other, while the gold value of merchandise brought to New York has scarcely at all diminished.

From these facts Mr. Atkinson argues that nearly the whole of the vast saving in freight charges has gone into the pockets of the producers. Seeking a cause for this enormous saving—which, he shows, is paying off the national debt without requiring a single hour's extra work at anybody's hands—he finds that the era of rapid reduction in freight charges has been identical with the era of railway consolidation, and he argues from this that the latter fact has been a chief cause of the former. He concludes that unrestricted consolidation has been a good thing for producers, and it is a fair inference from his argument that what other economists look upon as a dangerous tendency to gigantic monopoly is a good thing for the people and ought not to be interfered with by legislation or otherwise. Indeed, his direct teaching is to this effect.

We are not now disposed to dispute this proposition or to question the assumed universality of the principle which Mr. Atkinson seems inclined to deduce from it. We are concerned now only with the dangerous and bewildering nature of figures when used as logical implements. If Mr. Atkinson had been one of those persons who sniff danger in every breath of monopoly, he might easily have made use of his figures for a purpose precisely contrary to that for which he has in fact used them. He might, in that case, have shown that the period covered by his statistics has been the period of sharpest and strongest competition; that for the first time in the history of the country there have been during that time four great competitors for the transportation business of the country, each controlling through lines and feeders, each free to fight with all its might, and each strong enough, financially and otherwise, to compel its rivals to accept narrow margins of profit. He might have argued from these facts that the enormous sum saved to the farmers by the reduction of freight charges has come from the existence of free and strong competition; that the result is due to the fact that the great trunk lines have not been consolidated with each other; that the saving is due, not to the growth of beneficent monopoly, but to the failure of the great railway corporations to form a baneful monopoly.

We suspect that neither the argument which Mr. Atkinson has actually made nor that which we have suggested as possible is quite sound or complete. Both are misleading, because in both that which has been accomplished by complex forces is attributed to a single and simple force. There are other factors which have had an appreciable effect upon the result. When a Pittsburg coal-mine owner discovered that a stern wheel steam-boat, fitted with balance rudders, could push coal boats in acres down the river, and, by dint of backing and making herself alternately the pivot and the further end of a swinging mass, could carry an absurdly large cargo safely around the bends of western rivers, he wrought a revolution in river transportation without knowing it. It was about the year 1867 that a company was formed for the purpose of applying this method to the transportation of grain and general merchandise. For a time the enterprise languished because of a difficulty. The greater part of the freight to be carried was consigned by the owners in the interior to forwarders in the river towns, to be shipped, and nearly all of it was insured in open policies which forbade shipment on barges.

A wealthy firm of merchants in Cairo, Ill., saw here their opportunity. Placed as they were at the extreme end of the railway routes to the sea, they were at a disadvantage in railway shipment, and could not compete with Chicago merchants for grain destined to Europe. Their remedy lay, as they believed, in the success of the barge scheme, and they applied themselves to the work of removing the obstacle. They so far followed Mr. Boffin's example as to employ a literary man—a journalist—but one without a wooden leg, to "write up" the barge plan, not in newspaper or magazine articles, but in diplomatic letters addressed to boards of underwriters, and designed to show that the risk was actually smaller on barge freights than on steamboat shipments, and further that those underwriters who should first remove the barge restriction from their open policies would reap a rich harvest in freight insurance.

The plan succeeded, and it is worthy of note that the barge lines became formidable as actual and possible competitors of the railroads, almost exactly at the chronological point at which Mr. Atkinson's figures begin to run.

Why may we not contend, therefore, that the farmers owe the profit they have reaped from steadily diminishing rates of freight to the fact that a literary man without a wooden leg was employed by the Cairo merchants? If it is in order to attribute the results of vast and complex economic forces to single and simple causes, the further we go in our search for the ultimate cause, the more dramatic the effect is. Mr. Atkinson says that "the price of wheat in Odessa controls the policy of the New York Central railroad," an utterance from which we infer that he is not indifferent to dramatic effects of this sort. The stern-wheel steamboat pushing coal and the journalist writing letters lend themselves far more readily to such effects than consolidation and monopoly do, and choosing between the two first-named forces, we prefer the journalist the more because professional pride is gratified by his exaltation into a great economic agency.

PACIFIC COAST NEWS.

CALIFORNIA.

Railroad Work in Nevada.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 1.—A dispatch from Eureka, Nev., says that grading commenced on the Eureka and Colorado River railroad to-day. Two gangs of men were set to work. It is said that the force will be increased from day to day. The superintendent asserts that he will have 20 miles in operation by Christmas. The company was originally organized by citizens of Eureka, who lately sold their franchise to the Denver and Rio Grande company. The price paid to the local company was $50,000. This Eureka branch is destined to connect with the Denver and Rio Grande at some point in Utah near Iron mountain.

Villard Buys a California Road.

Arrangements have been completed for the transfer of the North Pacific Coast railroad to parties supposed to be in the interest of Villard, of the Northern Pacific railroad.

Absconded Clerk.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 1.—It is now known that County Clerk Stuart has gone east. He went on Friday last. The amount of money he got away with is not known, but must have been large. The law allowed him 26 copyists. He ran 87, for which demands have been made, the coin for which he pocketed leaving the people in the lurch. It is supposed many of the demands were dummies. He also borrowed several sums which he did not pay.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 1.—County Clerk Stuart is said to be in town. His wife says that he is in the city, but broken down with nervousness and worry. The bank of California is stuck about $6000 on warrants, and several other banks and brokers from $1000 down.

Wm. A. Stuart, county clerk, resigned to-night and Gen. John McComb was elected to fill the vacancy.

Chinese Row.

There was a big fight in Chinatown this afternoon. Pistols and knives were used. Several Chinamen more or less hurt. None killed.

The Mint Investigation.

At the mint investigation to-day Thomas M'Carty, assistant melter and refiner, was put on the stand by complainants to prove that Mr. Dodge, superintendent, knew that bullion unfit for coinage was sent to the coiner, and witness testified such to be the fact. He said that the melter and refiner had often complained of the fact, but the testimony was not allowed, as it was not shown that complaints were made to Dodge. Witness stated that the oftener bullion was remitted the more loss the government sustained by wastage. F. B. Gilcott, until lately coiner of the mint, testified that in some cases bullion sent to his department for coinage was exceptionally bad, and the metal has to be re-handled, entailing additional expense. He called Dodge's attention to badness of the metal, accompanied him to the coiner's room and showed him the evils of using bad metal, but there was no remedy applied to do away with the evil. On account of the inferior bullion extra work will average one month in a year and the expense amounts to over $12,000 per annum. Witness considered Superintendent Dodge either willfully negligent or ignorant.

The California Prison Management.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 1.—The state prison investigation was resumed this morning. Ellis, clerk at the prison, testified that $85 was raised as a campaign fund among the officers of the prison in 1880, to aid Garfield. These contributions were voluntary, some officers refusing to contribute. Witness described the manner in which directors' mileage was paid them. The directors audited their own claims for expenses which the clerk paid. W. Everson, prison director, said that he interpreted the law to mean that directors could not draw mileage from any place outside of the state. It came out on Everson's examination that Director Chapman, who lives in Chico, had received from the state $3,850, including a monthly salary of $100 since January, 1880, to July 31, 1881.

COMPULSORY EDUCATION.

While this journal has often expressed [illegible] methods of the [illegible] has always upheld the [illegible] plan of public education under direction of the state. Its criticisms have been directed [illegible] of the proper scope of [illegible] [illegible] of this subject hitherto [illegible] here. If it be granted that education ought to be as widely diffused as possible it is difficult to see how any one can [illegible] oppose the feature of compulsory attendance as [illegible] to the school. It would appear reasonable to say that the state has as much right to require attendance at school as it has to enforce a tax to call schools into existence. The objection that government has no right to compel parents to send their children to school begs the question. All governments are based on compulsion. The whole school system rests on that idea. There is no more tyranny or hardship in compelling parents to send their children to school than in compelling them to pay taxes for the support of the schools and the one is no more at variance with American ideas than the other. If the state has a right to establish and maintain a school system it would seem to have a right to do everything necessary to make it efficient and successful. The principle need not be carried to the extent of forcing parents to send their children to the public schools. Equivalent education at private schools, if parents preferred it for religious or other reasons, would suffice. The more intelligent opponents of compulsory education oppose it on account of the alleged practical difficulties in the way of its enforcement, and they argue that it would lessen rather than increase the efficiency of the school system. It is claimed that human nature is so constituted that when a man is required by law to do a certain thing, he dislikes to do it of his own free will, and if a compulsory education law should be enacted many parents would wait for the officers of the law to exact compliance rather than obey it of their own motion. This argument, however, assumes two things, which would require demonstration: first, that there is such a principle of human nature as that referred to; and, second, that a compulsory education law would call it into action. We do not understand that the experience of those countries where compulsory education prevails justifies either of these assumptions. No doubt the danger of non-enforcement of the law would be greater here than in any European country, since all laws are better enforced there than here, and their governmental machinery gives them peculiar facilities for enforcing such a law as the one under consideration. But in all the countries of Europe where compulsory education prevails the law is rigidly enforced, and it is considered an indispensable part of the educational system.

FREE AND CONVICT LABOR.

When a man commits a crime he forfeits his liberty, but he does not forfeit the duty which he owes to the state to earn his own living, and in exacting from him the labor to support himself and relieve the free labor of the country from the burden of maintaining him, the state acts wisely. Hence the clamor raised by short-sighted people about the pernicious practice of allowing convicted criminals to compete with free laborers, is the veriest bosh, because it is not possible to separate any labor which the state can require of convicts or which can be performed by them, from competition to some degree with free labor. In fact, there is nothing which the convict can do at any profit to the state or to pay the expense of his keeping that may not be done by free labor, outside the prison walls. At Salem a number of men or firms regularly employ some of the convicts under the contract system, and by so doing partially relieve the state of the expense of running the penitentiary. These convicts are engaged in different avocations under our laws for hiring out their labor and while they are doing work that might be done by free labor and so far competing with it, they are doing so no more than they would be were the contract system abolished and the state to assume the place of contractor. No one, says a writer on this subject, will pretend to say that state prisoners should not be made self-supporting and thereby relieve the people of some of the burdens of taxation. To make them self-supporting they must be employed at some profitable labor. By the contract system the state is relieved from the necessity of engaging in competitive trade. If the state assume the working of the prisoners it must enter the market for the purchase of the raw materials and it must offer its wares at such prices as will command purchasers. In short, it must compete with free labor at every step it takes. The evil complained of really has no existence and the complaint comes mostly from demagogues or men whose labor a very small amount of competition would overcome. The only way in which the competition with free labor can be obviated is by turning the criminals into the building prepared for them and hiring free laborers to wait on them, do their cooking and washing, but never allowing a prisoner to do anything which a free man can do; for according to those who are grumbling about the matter, every time a rascally convict washes his own shirt he is "taking the bread out of some poor woman's mouth." The opponents of the system of making state prisoners work for pay claim further that it degrades labor and that every degradation of labor is inimical to the interests of the state, but the truth is that nothing can degrade any legitimate calling. Men who follow a calling may be degraded, but the calling itself, never; some lawyers and doctors and even preachers are bad men, but no good lawyer, doctor or preacher will think his profession is degraded by the black sheep which engage in it. So it is with labor, honest work is ever and always honorable in itself, though dishonest and dishonorable men may be compelled to perform it. Every man who performs his part of the great aggregate of labor which there is to do adds so much to the general growth and prosperity, and is therefore doing some good in the world, while every one who is merely an idle consumer, is a curse to the whole.

SHIPPING FLOUR.

We yesterday offered some remarks upon the subject of shipping flour to Europe from the United States, and the feeling excited among British millers upon the subject of American competition in this commodity. Our attention is since called to the views of a leading exporter of California upon this question as set forth in a San Francisco exchange. He claims that owing to our distance from Europe, the principal consumption of our breadstuffs, and the consequent large proportion as regards value that is paid for freight, the question has often been raised whether much more than is now shipped should be sent to Europe in the shape of flour. At first sight the affirmative seems the answer to this question as [illegible] value can certainly be carried for [illegible] freight in the shape of flour than can be [illegible] of wheat. But on careful inquiry [illegible] from the most thoughtful and experienced [illegible] that there are certain difficulties [illegible] details in the trade [illegible] to show that the simple export of wheat is [illegible] profitable. In witness of this, it is pointed [illegible]

1. That the increased value of flour over wheat largely consists of labor, fuel, machinery, and interest on capital [illegible] manufacture, all of which are much [illegible] than in Europe.

2. That twenty cargoes of wheat can be [illegible] and sold while one [illegible] of flour is being made, loaded and disposed [illegible] number of buyers in Europe [illegible] flour to fifty for wheat.

3. That the only slightly increasing export of flour being much less than the increase in our wheat shipments, shows that it is not profitable, or otherwise in these days of cheaper capital and increased competition the field would have been more [illegible] by good enterprising firms.

It is further maintained that flour is much slower and more expensive to sell in Europe than wheat, and that while every miller in England and on the continent within reach of our cargoes is open to buy our wheat, there are only a very few speculative flour dealers that are willing to risk the offending of their patrons, the millers, that will ever buy our cargoes of flour, and then only at a margin sufficient to protect themselves from all risk. From these reasons it is thought the time is yet distant that will see 50 per cent. of our exports leave us in the shape of flour, and it is evident that extreme caution should be exercised before any extension of our flour exports be inaugurated.

OREGON AND CALIFORNIA LINE.

As preliminary to a through line of railway joining Oregon and California, the North Pacific Coast Railroad, beginning on the north side of San Francisco bay and extending through Sonoma and Mendocino counties, has been purchased by parties presumably in the interest of Mr. Villard. It is confidently asserted by those who are in position which should enable them to know, that within two years the Villard syndicate will have a through line from Oregon to San Francisco entirely independent of the Central Pacific system. It is supposed that this road will be constructed nearer the coast than any line planned hitherto. Purchase of the North Pacific Coast road (this name must not be confounded with the Northern Pacific) indicates a purpose to establish the line through the coast counties of California and Oregon, to junction with the road now operating from Portland to Roseburg. There will be some rugged country along the route, but most of the way the lands will be valuable for cultivation or for timber. Connection here with the great northern transcontinental system will give a through line from the east and Chicago that may compete with the other transcontinental roads.

A Texas paper says of "Billy the Kid:" "This little human viper was a perfect scourge to the region which he made his habitat. His success and the absolute terror his name inspired shows clearly that the era of the supremacy of men of the Ajax build is a thing of the past. An iron head, a heart of steel, a hand that obeyed without fail the lightning of the eye, made this callow stripling the master of braves and the terror of the country. No carniverous beast, be it royal tiger or Numidian lion, was ever furnished with instruments of death so potential as this slim youth, who without the sentiment of fear, and armed with that most murderous of weapons, the improved revolver, acted upon a crowd of men very much as a deadly electrical battery. 'The Kid' had lived but twenty-one years, but boasted of having killed as many men as his years represented." The Texas paper expresses its satisfaction that this interesting villain was not a native of that state or of the west. He was a product of New York, and as a breeder of such an animal New York must take the ribbon. "The Kid's" name was William McCarthy.

Here is a chance for the scientific essayists who beset newspaper offices. The king of the Belgians offers $5000 for the best essay on the subject of improving ports on sandy shores. If we had on hand the various articles sent to this journal for the past ten years on improving ports from Cape Flattery to Humboldt Bay, but consigned to the waste basket, his majesty of Belgium might get all the information he wanted at a much less figure. We would in fact be prepared to send him a bushel of such essays for a fifth of the money, and discount the bill besides.

The total vote cast and counted at the last presidential election was 9,237,000. Advance sheets of the census and careful estimates say that over twenty per cent. of these votes were cast by illiterate persons. Sixteen southern states contain one-third of the entire vote of the country, and more than half of that vote is illiterate. In the eastern, northern and western states there are 457,000 illiterate votes. In 1870 illiteracy had grown to one-sixth of our population, and in 1880 it was one-fifth. In New York state alone nearly 55 per cent. of the illiterate live in cities.

The trustees of the English cemetery in which the remains of William Penn repose have given a respectful hearing to Mr. George L. Harrison, who was sent over by the state of Pennsylvania to secure the removal of the remains to Philadelphia, but have declined to accede to the proposal. They say, in explanation of their refusal, that Penn's known wishes would be flagrantly disregarded if his remains were removed, and that a number of his descendants are opposed to the contemplated removal.

The total immigration into the United States for the year ending June 30, 1881, amounted to 668,000 in round numbers. Of these, 209,000 came from Germany, 153,000 from Great Britain and Ireland, 118,000 from the Dominion of Canada, and 120,000 from the different Scandinavian countries. It is believed that emigration will decline during the current year, especially from Great Britain and Ireland.

William H. English, who was heard of last year in convention with a bar'l, it appears didn't spend his whole fortune trying to lead the democratic party out of the desert of defeat and into the green pastures of victory. His tax bills for the current year amount to $20,000, and the inference is that he is still adding to the population of his mortgage graveyard.

Col. W. Milnor Roberts, a civil engineer of note, some years ago chief engineer of the Northern Pacific railroad, died at Rio Janeiro on the 14th of July. At the time of his death he held the position of chief engineer under the emperor of Brazil, at a salary of $20,000 per annum.

There are held by individuals in the New England states $70,272,050 worth of registered United States bonds, in the southern states $13,139,800, in the western states $51,418,740, in the middle states $279,008,250, and by banks, insurance and trust companies $227,451,550.

Among the members of President Garfield's cabinet there is a remarkably easy familiarity. Secretary Lincoln is called "Bob" by his fellow members, and Secretary Blaine in addressing Secretary Windom usually calls him "Bill."

The increase in the total amount [illegible] business transacted during the fiscal year ended June 30 is about ten millions dollars in excess of the preceding year. The total [illegible]

BARGAIN ROOM FOR CLOTHING.

We can lose profits, but we mustn't lose sales. We have divided our clothing into two parts. One part consists of that which must be sold quickly at whatever price it'll bring quickly in August. The other part consists of that which'll go any way. The former is marked down sharply; in proportion to the urgency of each case. It consists largely of whole suits for men and boys of all sizes; and partly of odd garments. If we had no other clothing but this which is marked down we should have a large and, we may almost say, a full stock. As good clothing as we have in store is among it.

[illegible] yesterday [illegible] a Chinaman [illegible] charging him with attempting [illegible] daughter of complainant. [illegible] a wife and daughter, a girl about twelve [illegible] some time past he has had in his employ [illegible] named Charley. Yesterday morning [illegible] Chinaman in the act of perpetrating [illegible] his little girl. [illegible] was so [illegible] discovery, that he rushed to the [illegible] started toward [illegible] purpose [illegible] however [illegible] who had been wrought up to a [illegible] pitch [illegible] his sanguinary purpose [illegible] then came to the [illegible] complaint against the Chinaman [illegible] Justice Patrick. That officer issued a warrant [illegible] Constable [illegible] after the [illegible] He has not yet been arrested [illegible]

[illegible] About [illegible] o'clock yesterday afternoon the [illegible] of an unknown man was found [illegible] the [illegible] of Stark street. Coroner Garnold was notified, [illegible] caused the remains to be removed to the morgue. That officer proceeded to examine the [illegible] of the drowned man, but without finding anything giving a clue to his identity. He had on a dark [illegible] of cassimere clothes, a white shirt with a [illegible] undershirt and a pair of gaiter shoes. His hair and mustache were dark sandy and he was closely shaven. In his vest pocket the coroner found [illegible] cent piece and a [illegible] cent piece in silver, and in his breast coat pocket a dark [illegible] pipe. In his pants pocket was found a white handled pocket knife. Nothing else was found upon his person when taken from the water. From appearances the body had been in the water about ten days. The remains can be seen at the morgue, where they can be viewed by any one who may think he can identify them.

ESTIMATES FILED.—Yesterday W. S. Chapman city surveyor, filed in the office of the auditor his estimates of the great improvement of Sixth street, from the north line of B street to the south line of Caruthers street, covering 63 city blocks, reckoning both sides of the street. The estimates are very voluminous in detail, but are summed up as follows: [illegible] cubic yards of excavation, [illegible] cubic yards of embankment, 2118 linear feet of new sidewalk to be laid, 873 linear feet of new curbstone, [illegible] feet of new crosswalk to be relaid, 240 feet of box gutter, and 10,041 cubic yards of macadam. The contracts will be awarded next Tuesday afternoon at 1 o'clock.

AN INSANE FATHER.—A German, who lives near Reedsville, in Washington county, whose name could not be ascertained, it is reported shot his daughter, a grown young woman, in the arm on Sunday, during an insane fit. The provocation of the shooting is not known. The wound is said to be not serious. After the deed the insane father left his home and started in the direction of Portland. A man started in pursuit, but at last accounts the would-be murderer had not been captured.

CORNER STONE LAID.—At 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon the corner stone of the Catholic church, East Portland, on the corner of Tenth and J streets, was laid. The ceremonies were solemn, impressive and appropriate, and were conducted by Most Reverend Archbishop Seghers, assisted by the Rev. Fathers Machin and Glorieux. The A. O. H. and Father Matthew societies, in full regalia, were in attendance, and made an imposing appearance.

SALE OF FINE HORSES.—H. P. Isaacs, of Walla Walla, has bought from Capt. Geo. Flavel the thoroughbred mare Caddie R., and will take her to Walla Walla. Paul Schulze yesterday bought of Jos. Taylor the chestnut colt Record, 5 years old, by Wild Idle—Liz. Givens. V. B. DeLashmutt bought of Robert Kennedy of Walla Walla, the bay stallion Dexter, the price being $1500.

COLONY ORGANIZED.—We learn that a colony is organizing to settle in North River valley, Chehalis county, W. T., by R. D. Pitt on First street, New Market block, Portland; and quite a large number of persons have signed articles of agreement to form such colony. A map and description of North River valley with prospectus of the enterprise can be seen at Mr. Pitt's office.

THE BIG FIRE.—At 4 o'clock A. M., on the 2d of August, 1873, a fire broke out at the corner of First and Salmon streets, and in less than six hours 21 blocks in Portland were reduced to ashes. There are thousands of Portlanders who remember with sorrow that memorable, and never-to-be-forgotten day. To-day recurs the eighth anniversary of the great August fire.

ADJUDGED INSANE.—C. W. Knox, the crazy fellow who made a murderous assault on the person of James Bennett, the well known scissors grinder, last Saturday, and came near cutting his throat, was examined yesterday before the proper authorities on the charge of lunacy. He was adjudged insane and committed to the asylum yesterday afternoon.

SPIRITUAL PHENOMENA.—Dr. Truesdell gave an exhibition of spiritual manifestations, magnetic healing, etc., last evening at the Y. M. C. A., to a large audience; and will this evening, August 2d, prove—through magnetic inhalations—that all of these mysterious forces are governed by fixed scientific law.

THE INQUEST.—The inquest over the remains of the unknown man found floating in the river yesterday will be held by Coroner Garnold at the morgue this morning at 9:30. Coroner Garnold requests all persons who may be able to identify the body to call at his shop prior to or subsequent to the inquest.

THE RED MEN.—The great council of I. O. R. M., of Oregon, meets in this city to-morrow. A number of delegates from the different lodges of the state are already here. Mr. John Cimbroski and Dan. Cronemiller come as representatives from Jacksonville, Pocahontas lodge.

IMPROVING.—Bishop Haven, who had what threatened to be a serious relapse on Saturday, was considerably better this morning, and although still seriously ill strong hopes are indulged as to his final recovery.

FALSE ALARM.—At 12:15 this morning an alarm of fire was sounded from the bell in East Portland. The alarm was a false one, and did not call out the vigilant fire department of that city.

THE "STARS."—The members of the Star base ball club are requested to meet on the East Portland grounds at 6 o'clock this evening preparatory to their match game at Oregon City.

THROUGH TRIP.—The Lurline will make a through trip to Ilwaco to-morrow, leaving her dock at the foot of Washington street at 6:30 and the East Portland dock half an hour later.

STEAMER ARRIVED.—The steamship Columbia arrived at this port last evening from San Francisco at 11:30. She brought a full freight and a large number of passengers.

L. R. S.—The Ladies' Relief Society will meet this (Tuesday) afternoon at 3 o'clock, in the basement of the Presbyterian church.

THREE EXCITING RACES.

FANNIE KELLOGG, CADDIE R. AND TRADE DOLLAR THE WINNERS YESTERDAY.

Seven Heats Required to Decide the Trot, each [illegible] having Taken Two. Two Second Running Races Announced for Saturday, Etc., Etc.

The first meeting of the Northwestern District [illegible] Agricultural Association has closed. Receipts will cover the [illegible] current expenses and the [illegible] attending races [illegible] track. [illegible] the [illegible] of the fastest horses on the north [illegible] coast in trials of speed [illegible] The receipts will be small but large enough [illegible] Mr. R. R. [illegible] president, Mr. R. F. Byler, secretary, [illegible] treasurer, and [illegible] Messrs. [illegible] H. A. Thompson, [illegible] John Clark and [illegible] [illegible] hundred and [illegible] It has been demonstrated that Portland [illegible] support an [illegible] meeting [illegible] honest sport that characterized [illegible] held on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday [illegible] last week, and Monday of this week [illegible] long [illegible] the association live and prosper.

It is still more gratifying to be able to state that every owner whose horses competed for purses feels that there was no dishonesty in the contests, that races won were fairly won, that the judges acted impartially, that the different spites which necessarily [illegible] up were decided fairly, that men who [illegible] horses [illegible] the drivers and jockeys [illegible] The purses [illegible] were hung up [illegible] and [illegible] new [illegible] bags, and when the decisions were announced the money was handed to the winner without any rebate or delay.

Excellent order was maintained throughout, and in this the management did more than was had thought they could accomplish. A race track can not be made as decorous as a drawing room, or a [illegible] but at this meeting gentlemen could take their wives and daughters with as little danger of insult, embarrassment or even inconvenience as to the theatre. The large proportion of ladies in attendance on the last day is strong [illegible] approval of this wise feature of the meeting.

Several minor matters need revision, and the track must be slightly changed. These will be referred to at some other time.

YESTERDAY'S SPORT.

The attendance was large, fully equal to the opening day. The track was in splendid condition both for trotting and running. Pools on every race and on every heat of the trot sold lively. It is estimated that $24,000 passed through the pool box during the week. The judges of the trot were Judge Wm. Strong, W. G. Scoggins and Col. P. D. W. Hurdenberg; the time keepers, B. C. Leonard, T. M. Richardson and Capt. Keller. Patsy Duffy rode Trade Dollar and Caddie R., and it is somewhat remarkable that his gold cap and jacket passed under the wire first in all five running races of the week.

The Trot.

Fannie Kellogg was a strong favorite, selling $6 to $1 on Kelly and $1 on Pedro. Kelly drew the pole, Pedro 2 and Kellogg on the outside. After five false starts the word go was given with Kellogg two lengths behind. She was driven by Hogaboom, Pedro by Lindsey and Kelly by Looby. Kellogg and Kelly broke at the turn, Pedro trotting squarely. Kelly recovered quickly and took the lead, Kelly two lengths behind Pedro. At the quarter Pedro passed Kellogg, but immediately left his feet. Kellogg then behaved equally bad, and Kelly who trotted beautifully from the quarter to the wire, took the heat easily in 2:36½. Pedro a bad second and Kellogg barely saving his distance. The latter made more than half the mile on a semi-run.

SECOND HEAT.

Pools sold: Kellogg $45, Kelly $15, Pedro $3. After five strings the horses got off with an even start. All three left their feet at the turn. At the quarter Pedro took the lead, Kellogg following close and Kelly five lengths behind. The mare gained steadily and won the heat easily in 2:42½, Pedro and Kelly having badly, the former coming in second.

THIRD HEAT.

Pools sold: Kellogg $20, Kelly $7, Pedro $1. After two false starts, a good send-off was given, Kellogg taking commanding lead and holding it to the end. Time 2:39. Pedro led Kelly to the quarter, when the latter passed him, coming in a good second.

FOURTH HEAT.

Pools sold: Kellogg $20, Kelly $4, Pedro $1. Lesby was substituted by Mismer as driver of Kelly. A good start was made and at the quarter all three were in bunch. On the back stretch, Kellogg breaking dropped behind, and Kelly and Pedro by a length. Towards the three-quarters Kellogg lapped Pedro, and both pressed the roan, who entered the stretch with Pedro's nose at his sulky and the mare only a length behind. Pedro and Kellogg could not keep their feet, and Kelly took the heat in 2:40½, Pedro a good 2d, and Kellogg 3d.

FIFTH HEAT.

Now things got exciting. Kelly had two heats and Kellogg two. Men with long purses got around the pool box and within ten minutes $1600 or $2000 worth were sold, most of them being for over $160. This is a sample: Kellogg $70, Kelly $35, Pedro $5. After five false starts the word was given, Pedro taking the lead and holding it to the end, winning easily in 2:42½, Kellogg a bad second, and Kelly barely saving his distance.

SIXTH HEAT.

Pools sold: Kellogg $45, Kelly $15, Pedro $5. Kelly at a disadvantage of two lengths at the start. Kellogg broke twice, giving Pedro a good lead, Kelly going. At the quarter the three passed in a bunch. The two "Ks." broke on the back stretch. On entering the home stretch Kellogg had lapped Pedro and was coming down at good pace when she left her feet. After two jumps she was brought down, gaining at every step seemed certain of winning when up went her head and feet at the distance post. Pedro trotting steadily took the heat in [illegible] Kellogg at his sulky and Kelly poking five lengths behind.

SEVENTH AND LAST HEAT.

Things now were exciting, and likewise interesting. Two heats each, and no telling who would take the next. Pools sold: Pedro $10, Kellogg $11, Kelly $[illegible]. In the start Kelly was one length behind. The mare broke at the turn, giving Pedro a lead which he held to the quarter, Kellogg's nose at his sulky. At the ¾ the mare lapped Pedro and widened the gap to the wire, winning in 2:40½. Pedro a bad second and Kelly distanced.

The Running Races

were very interesting and so hotly contested that both were exciting. The judges were Wm. Frazer, E. Corbett, and C. P. Bacon, and the time keepers Captain Barr, T. M. Richardson and John Green. Entries for the ¾ dash for consolation purse were Nova Wines, Caddie R., and Mayflower. When it became known that Patsy Duffy was to ride Caddie R. she became favorite in the pools, selling for $30, against $10 on Winters and $6 on Mayflower. Thursday evening she brought $16 to Winters $20. At the first attempt the flyers got off in good style and kept in bunch to the quarter, the brown mare leading Mayflower by half a lap and Neva's head at Mayflower's hip. Caddie kept her lead to the five-eighths, hotly pushed by Winters, who had passed Mayflower. At this point the bay filly lapped the brown, and for the run to the hill in front of the three-quarters only one horse and rider could be seen. Caddie's her neck ahead on the last turn, but both seemed enter the stretch side by side. Down they came neck and neck at tremendous pace, both under the whip. At the distance post Winters tired and Caddie won easily by three lengths in [illegible] Winters 2d, Mayflower 3d.

[illegible] TWO AND ONE-EIGHTH MILE DASH.

Ordinance, Jack Douglass and Trade Dollar were named. Pools were sold: Trade Dollar, $25, Douglass $6, Ordinance $3. Positions were chosen as follows: Douglass drew the pole, Trade Dollar 2d, and Ordinance outside. At the second attempt the flag dropped, Ordinance taking the lead. They passed the stand Trade Dollar two laps behind the bay filly, [illegible] the chestnut horse an equal distance behind the Walla Walla mare. All three hugged the fence. Ordinance increased her lead to eight or ten lengths and held it past the stand. From there to the half Trade Dollar gradually closed the gap, Douglass keeping [illegible] At the five-eighths, Trade Dollar collared the leader, and at the three-quarters Patsy's gold cap showed half a length in front of Ordinance, who now developed weakness. The chestnut horse was now let out, and got to Trade Dollar's haunches as they entered the stretch. He was [illegible] for Isaacs' mare, who swerved slightly the distance post, causing Douglass to check for an instant, nearly but not quite making a [illegible] The Walla Walla mare won by a lap in [illegible] Douglass 2d [illegible] and Ordinance [illegible] third. The citizens of Seattle will entertain [illegible] for delegates.

The regular fare from Portland to Seattle is about $10, meals extra. Quite a large number of delegates have been elected in this part of Oregon, a large proportion of whom will go and enjoy the convention, partake of the hospitalities of the people of the city of the sound, and have an opportunity to brace up. The convention will continue four days, closing on Sunday night.

A number of cases of membranous croup are reported [illegible] near Pi[illegible] Mr. Wesley [illegible] Martha [illegible]

Mrs. [illegible] of Williams creek, Jackson county, fell from a hay wagon last week, receiving injuries that terminated fatally on Tuesday last. She was about [illegible] years of age and leaves a family of children.

Louis, a nine year old son of W. J. Plymale of Jacksonville, while playing with powder recently had his face and hands badly blackened and burned. His eyebrows were singed off and his right eye was greatly injured. His shirt and pants caught fire, but he ran to a mud puddle near by and plunged in, extinguishing the flames.

SENDING. For the past week or ten days a number of Chinamen have been engaged at the Jacksonville cemetery exhuming the bones of dead Chinamen, preparatory to shipping them to the celestial empire. About fifty dead who have been dead five or six years are being taken up and the bones of each placed in a separate sack and labeled with the name of the deceased. These sacks are afterward placed in boxes, so many sacks in each box, and then they are ready to be shipped to China. It is a ghastly process.

Washington Territory.

The post Episcopal church at Coeur d'Alene is nearly completed. It promises to be a very handsome structure.

Travel between Medical lake and Spokan Falls has greatly increased during the last month. A part of the time two stages have been run on the line.

Total number of children in the Dayton district, of all ages, under 21 years, 541; between 4 and 21 years, males, 207, females, 211, total, 418. Increase over the census of last year, 84.

Prairie chickens and plover, young, fat and tempting, are plenty in the country southwest of Fish lake. This game is very plenty near Westwood, and the Coeur d'Alene sportsmen are having rare sport.

F. A. Pugh, who farms near Saltese lake, Spokan county, shows a sample of the oats growing on his farm, the stalk is 75 inches in height. He also shows timothy more than 50 inches in height, and wheat about the same.

The bridge timber for the four trestles to be constructed over the canyon nine miles from the junction, is now lying at the depot grounds. There is about [illegible] feet of it. About thirty carpenters are now engaged in shaping and framing it.

The foreman and teamster in Bal[illegible] logging camp on the Skagit river, in a single week, not long since, hauled [illegible] feet of sawlogs from the timber to the boom, working four yoke of oxen, four Chinamen and two white men, and being just six days. The road hauled over was a half mile in length.

The apple tree parasite that caused such trouble to orchardists in various localities in Oregon and Washington has appeared in Yakima county. Mr. Vaughn, who has a fine orchard at the mouth of the Natches, had his trees attacked and it has been with almost infinite care and labor that he has saved his trees.

Four vessels only, but all unusually large ones, took Seattle coal during July. They were the ship Two Brothers, [illegible] tons; ship Majestic, 1381 tons; bark Great Western, [illegible] tons; steamer Willamette, [illegible] tons. Total, [illegible] tons. The entire absence of shipping during the last eight days of the month cut down the exports at least one-fourth.

[illegible] We shall soon hear the noisy pounding of numerous quartz mills in our mountains. We learn that three will soon be in operation—one upon the location lead on the Swauk, owned by Shoudy & Co. Another will soon be pounding rock upon the claim of Cooper & Lockwood on the Peshastin, and lastly another on Nigger Gulch, by Marshal Blinn. Teams are now on their way to The Dalles for some of the machinery.

About 450 tons of wheat is shipped daily from Walla Walla to Portland. Of this M. C. Moore & Co. are shipping 253 tons per day, Dr. Blalock, 45 tons, and the balance is divided among the other grain men. With the exception of the grain shipped by Dr. Blalock, there has been none of this year's wheat shipped. There is still about 400 tons of last year's wheat stored away in the warehouses belonging principally to M. C. Moore & Co.

Last week J. B. Kriebuhl and twenty-four men commenced the erection of the new passenger and freight depot at Spokan Falls. The passenger depot will be 24x24 feet, and the freight depot 22x75 feet, with 10 and 12 foot platforms. The first depot will be two stories, the upper floor being intended as a residence for the local ticket and freight agents. It is probable that a room will be fitted up for the paymaster in the passenger depot. The building is to be completed in about two weeks.

Messrs. Blackman & Howard are making preparations to log on an extensive scale at Mukilteo. They have had constructed for their use by the North Pacific iron works, a road engine of six tons weight, which will be the first of this kind ever run on Puget sound. The boiler is upright, with two cylinders, one on each side, securely fastened to the boiler. These cylinders, which have a bore of six and a stroke of ten inches each, are attached to a shaft upon which are cogs, and this cog shaft is connected by cogs with the driving wheels. The gauge of the engine is [illegible] feet six inches. It is calculated to run on a sawed rail track. The maple for this track was sent up a few days ago, since which time it has been sawed, and loaded on a large barge and towed to Mukilteo. Messrs. Blackman & Howard are said to have a very fine body of timber at the latter point, which they propose to log by a railroad.

Spokan [illegible] M. Smythe of Spokan Falls, who has the contract for supplying Camp Spokan with hay, has a contract for clearing twenty-four miles of the right of way for the Northern Pacific between [illegible] lake and [illegible] with the privilege of going beyond the mountains. He has a large force of men employed, and will increase the number if he can secure them. Like other contractors on the line he finds it very difficult to get good laboring men. There are plenty of men following along the line, but they apply for work to be carried to other points on the road more than [illegible] to their transport than from any desire for labor. It is safe to say that a hundred men have in this way secured a passage to the front. A gentleman lately from the vicinity of [illegible] river says that the roads and trails there are [illegible] with stragglers, men able-bodied and every way fitted for hard labor, but determined to [illegible] at every opportunity.

AN EASTERN OREGON VALLEY AND ITS NAME.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

I hope you will have no objection to admit the following remarks in the columns of your valuable [illegible] assist in speaking and writing correctly a certain name. The account you gave in [illegible] of the Oregon Transcontinental [illegible] mentions among other names that of "Grand Ronde," the name of a valley [illegible] eastern Oregon. My attention is called to that name, [illegible] it is incorrectly spelt, [illegible] a totally different meaning from what it really should.

[illegible] adjective and a substantive. The first "Ronde" is certainly not an English, but a French word. The adjective "Grand" is both English and French. The French word "Ronde" being of the feminine gender requires, according to French grammatical rules, the adjective to be of the same gender, which is "grande," by the addition of the final "e" to "grand" of the word "Grande Ronde." The proper form is "Grande Ronde," and to say or write "Grand Ronde" is wrong and unpardonable. But what does the French word "Ronde" mean? It means a patrol, the rounds of an officer visiting his subjects. Knowing the meaning of this word I next inquired and tried who made the "Grande Ronde," and when did it take place? And I find to my surprise that no [illegible] ever existed in the "Grande Ronde valley," and consequently no officer ever had occasion to make his rounds there. The truth about this is, that the name should be spelt and written "Grand Rond," as it is a French name, given by the French Canadian trappers and traders in the employ of the Hudson Bay and Northwestern companies to the beautiful valley in Union county, on account of its being surrounded by grand and lofty mountains, making a "Grand Rond," "Grand Round" or a grand surrounding.

As the valley now occupied by an Indian reservation in Polk county was also called "Grand Rond" by the same French Canadians, and for the same reason of its being surrounded by lofty mountains, and has also been perverted and Americanized into the [illegible] "Grand Ronde," the foregoing explanation shows that it should be spelt and written "Grand Rond," in French and "Grand Round," in English.

The great extent of the "Grand Rond" valley in Union county, it being about twenty-one miles long by twenty miles wide, caused the Canadians to call it "la grande vallée," "the grand valley," hence the name of "La Grande" given by Americans both to the stream which waters that valley and to the county seat of Union county. ## KENNETH CARLE'S LOVE.

[illegible]

"Neither would I, Mr. Carle. Yet I presume [illegible] friendship [illegible] there are some things that even friendship has no right to ask. You are very [illegible] My heart is my own and I am free to bestow it upon whom I please. Pray do not speak of selling again."

"And I am to infer, then, that you never loved me; you have been trifling with me all the time you [illegible]"

"Infer anything you please," retorts Grace, hotly. "It makes no difference to me."

"Ah!"

It is not a short exclamation that Kenneth Carle utters, but a long, low sigh, that thrills Grace's heart with a strange emotion, and causes the color to rush in her cheeks. Then there is a long silence, while Kenneth gazes fixedly at the grass beneath his feet, and Grace stands motionless, now and then casting covert glances at her companion.

"Mr. Carle," she says, suddenly, "look at the darkening sky. There will be a storm soon. I shall return to the house. Will you come with me or stay here?"

"I will stay here," he replies, without raising his eyes from the ground; and she turns and leaves him.

At a short distance she pauses and looks behind her. She sees the rocky cliff, with the sea lashing itself into foam at its base; the tall figure standing near its edge, his head bowed, his dark, Greek-like features clearly outlined against the dull, gray sky, and an expression of anguish and pain crosses her face. It is succeeded, however, by a look of stern determination, and in a low, firm voice she says:

"I will not let this foolish love conquer. Money I want, and money I will have. I shall wed this rich stranger, for indeed he is almost a stranger to me, and Kenneth Carle shall never be more to me than a friend."

As Grace has predicted, a storm comes up quite suddenly; and as she is quite a distance from her home, she seeks shelter in a cottage at the foot of the hill.

It is a quaint, low-roofed building of very ancient date, and has been inhabited for many years by a tall, gypsy-looking woman, who, when she first took up her abode there, was a comely, bright-eyed, rosy-cheeked maiden, and now an old woman, yellow-skinned and gaunt.

Her black eyes, though, have never lost their keen brightness, but shine with such a steady, piercing light, that when any valuables are lost, the villagers laughingly remark that they could discover them instantly had they the light of Mother Leman's eyes to aid them.

These bright eyes turn upon Grace now as she enters the one room of the cottage that serves as kitchen, chamber and parlor, and a metallic voice says:

"Ah, is it you, my child, Grace? You were caught in the shower; are you not drenched?"

"Oh, no," Grace replies, seating herself. "I have walked very fast, and the wide-spreading trees sheltered me. You are very busy, I see. Do you never rest, Mother Leman?" with an arch smile.

"Yes, when the night comes," replies the old woman. "But my child, you are ill."

"No, indeed," says Grace. "Why, I thought I was looking unusually healthy. Are not my eyes bright, my cheeks rosy? For once, Mother Leman, your eyes, sharp as they are, have deceived you."

"No, I am sure you are ill," the other says, gazing at Grace so earnestly that she grows flushed and warm and wishes those piercing eyes would turn in some other direction. "You are ill, not physically, perhaps, but mentally. Grace, my child," warningly, "take an old woman's advice and never exchange an old love for a new."

Now, Mother Leman has heard several stories concerning Grace and her two suitors, and determines to discover whether they are real facts or idle rumors. She is satisfied as to their truth when she sees Grace start suddenly while her face flushes deeply.

"Ah, Grace, my child," she says, "don't act against your own heart. Turn back, turn back, before it is too late."

Grace draws back haughtily, while the same proud, angry expression that she wore when Kenneth Carle uttered the same words crossed her face.

"I don't know what you mean," rises to her lips, but knowing it is useless to try to evade or deceive this sharp-eyed woman, she answers:

"I am acting as my heart dictates. I see no reason why you should warn me."

And Mother Leman, perceiving that the subject is an unpleasant one to Grace, immediately changes it.

It is not long before the storm clears away, and Grace takes her departure. She is fully resolved now; she will marry the wealthy stranger and crush her love for Kenneth Carle. Nothing can alter her decision.

That very day the betrothal is sealed, and preparations for the wedding commenced.

The wealthy suitor showers costly presents upon her with a lavish hand; but somehow they do not afford Grace the pleasure she anticipated. The little ruby ring that Kenneth gave her is far more precious to her than all the millionaire's diamonds.

At last the eventful day arrives, and Grace dons the pure white wedding robes that are worth a fortune in themselves, excepting the costly jewels that glitter on her fair neck and arms, and among the braids of blue-black hair. Then the bridal party are driven away to the village church, and the marriage ceremony is performed.

Grace stands like a statue through it all, her face white and cold as the sparkling diamonds about her, and the village maidens' envy turns to pity, for they see what the love-blind husband does not, that she is an unhappy bride.

Kenneth Carle is not present at the wedding; he went away a week ago, the villagers say, and Grace is spared the pain of seeing him.

A few hours later Grace and her husband have left the little village and are on their way to the old world, where, amid new scenes and new people, surrounded by every luxury that money can buy, Grace will endeavor to forget her sorrow.

Ten years later. In the largest, handsomest room that "Eyrie hotel" can afford, sit two gentlemen: one a slim, blonde young man, whose attire borders on the "dandy" style, the other a tall, broad-shouldered gentleman, whom we have met before, Kenneth Carle. But he is no longer known by that name, for some reason of his own he has changed it to Ellis Cary.

Ten years have altered him greatly; indeed, it would be difficult for his nearest friend to recognize him. He is thinking of old times now, and, chancing to glance into the mirror opposite, smiles at the bronzed, bearded face revealed there as he contrasts it with the smooth, boyish one of ten years ago. He is aroused from his revery by the voice of his companion, saying—

"I say, Cary, have you seen the new arrival—a young widow, with no end of a fortune? Worth looking after, I tell you. There she goes now."

Kenneth glanced out of the window in time to see a slender figure, attired in deep mourning, pass by; but her head is averted, and he does not see her face.

"Handsome, too," continued his friend. "I got an introduction last evening. I'll present you to-night."

That evening Kenneth Carle, for by that name he is best known to us, meets the young widow in the hotel parlor and is introduced to her.

"Mrs. Ashly, Mr. Cary."

The widow bows low and softly murmurs a few words of acknowledgement. Kenneth glances at her face and draws a long breath of surprise, for beneath the dainty widow's cap he recognizes the blue-black hair, the dark gray eyes, the piquant features of his old love, Grace Ellsworth.

"Shall I reveal myself to her?" he asks himself; and after a moment's hesitation decides he will not, for the present at least. She does not recognize him, but [illegible] as Ellis Cary.

The days pass by, and slowly the conviction dawns upon him that he is falling in love with Grace Ashly over again. Yet is it over again? Is it not the old love that he believed dead, rising like a phoenix from the ashes? [illegible] he only knows that she has grown very dear to him, dearer than the maiden Grace Ellsworth had been.

At last he [illegible]

"Mr. Cary, [illegible] ten years ago I met Kenneth Carle and loved him. [illegible] my desire for [illegible] I cast him off for another who I knew could give me everything my heart desired. Every [illegible] did I say? Oh, no! he could not give me happiness. Since his death I have travelled from place to place, until I came here and met you. I like you, I respect you greatly, but I cannot love you. I can never love again. If knowing this you are willing to [illegible]

[illegible] Kenneth Carle [illegible]

[illegible] replies Grace [illegible]

[illegible]

"Yes, Kenneth, I know you now [illegible] can you still love me?"

"I can and I do," he replies, [illegible]

He looks down [illegible] pretty face [illegible] and there reads his answer.

And on the following [illegible] September [illegible] the wedding bells [illegible] for the second time, and [illegible] the merry bells have ceased pealing she has become the bride of her first and only love, Kenneth Carle.

OFFICE SEEKING.

One of the Many Connections of the Broad Road that Leads to Destruction.

Springfield Republican.

As Senator Bayard describes the gathering of the vast throng, "It makes my heart sick to see that [illegible] come, every inauguration season, flocking to Washington on the mere hope of an office, hanging around the hotels till their money is gone, and then pawning their watches, taking to drink and running down to the lowest degradation." This is merely one symptom of the disease. If the president and his cabinet would say and could say truly that the civil service was full, that no removals would be made except for cause, that vacancies, as they occur, would be filled by promotion, and that no new appointments were to be made, except at the bottom, and then of men sifted and selected by all the probationary methods applied to men in other professions or business; if this system were thoroughly adopted and adhered to, till people ceased to associate every inauguration with a sweep in the offices, these enthusiasts would cease to regard a public office as any more open to them by mere favoritism than membership of the bar, or the diploma of a doctor. Office seekers will then understand that office is no longer a gift out of hand, but a place of service to be won by special training, probation and experience. No young lawyer expects to get the privilege of practice till he has gone through quite a course of studies and examinations. What is there unreasonable in requiring other civil servants to go through equal probation?

NEW YORK FREIGHTS AND MARKETS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—There is no material change to note in the freight market via Cape Horn, which remains much as noted from time to time during the past few weeks. Rates in the meantime continue very steady with no prospect of change, especially downward.

Tonnage movement for the past month is quite large notwithstanding the general dullness of the market, but as three of the vessels were really loaded in June the increase is not so large as would seem. Departures were one vessel from Baltimore, one from Boston and five from this port, including the steamer City of Rio de Janeiro, in all, registering 13,381 tons, against five vessels of 7000 tons in the same month last year. The total movement for seven months foots up 37 vessels, registering 51,940, against 31 vessels of 51,089 tons in the corresponding months of last year. Tonnage on berth, and committed for this trade, is smaller than for the same period for a number of months, yet it is sufficient to carry the lines along for the next sixty days, unless the market should improve very much, of which at present there are no indications. The amount foots up ten vessels, registering in all less than 15,000 tons. Of these it is probable that six will get off this month. The latest charters are the new ships Tacoma, 1738 tons, general cargo from this port, the Solitaire from Philadelphia with coal on government account to Sitka and Mare Island, and the Annie H. Smith and Pactolus, railroad material to Tacoma, W. T. The steamer City of Para sailed hence July 30, had for San Francisco 311 bbls rosin, 200 bbls whiting, 50 bbls chalk, 3062 bars iron and a lot of chain stock, marble, etc., also for China 1,092 bales sheeting, 30 cases butter, 125 cases milk. The steamer Umatilla for Portland, sailed yesterday. She had a cargo principally of railroad material.

Markets are still quiet yet firm.

Wheat—Irregular, closing steady on account of French yield not turning out as well as expected.

Pork—Unchanged.

Lard—Better demand; 5@10 higher.

Rio Coffee—Rather quiet but firm; ⅛ higher.

Refined Sugars—Limited demand; lower.

Hides—Held firm, which checks transactions.

Turpentine—Easier.

Petroleum—Quiet.

English Crop Prospects.

The Standard in an article on harvest says that the general opinion in Mark Lane is that there is an average wheat crop in England. A great majority of reports from different districts confirm this estimate. The barley crop cannot fail to be an average one. The root crops are less promising than they have been at this period for many years. Potatoes, however, are good. Prospects in Scotland are much less favorable than in England. The most auspicious reports of all crops come from Ireland.

THE GENUINE
DR. C. McLANE'S
Celebrated American
WORM SPECIFIC OR

SYMPTOMS OF WORMS.

THE countenance is pale and leaden-colored, with occasional flushes, or a circumscribed spot on one or both cheeks; the eyes become dull; the pupils dilate; an azure semicircle runs along the lower eye-lid; the nose is irritated, swells, and sometimes bleeds; a swelling of the upper lip; occasional headache, with humming or throbbing of the ears; an unusual secretion of saliva; slimy or furred tongue; breath very foul, particularly in the morning; appetite variable, sometimes voracious, with a gnawing sensation of the stomach, at others, entirely gone; fleeting pains in the stomach; occasional nausea and vomiting; violent pains throughout the abdomen; bowels irregular, at times costive; stools slimy; not unfrequently tinged with blood; belly swollen and hard; urine turbid; respiration occasionally difficult, and accompanied by hiccough; cough sometimes dry and convulsive; uneasy and disturbed sleep, with grinding of the teeth; temper variable, but generally irritable, &c.

Whenever the above symptoms are found to exist,
DR. C. McLANE'S VERMIFUGE
will certainly effect a cure.

IT DOES NOT CONTAIN MERCURY in any form; it is an innocent preparation, not capable of doing the slightest injury to the most tender infant.

The genuine DR. McLANE'S VERMIFUGE bears the signatures of C. McLANE and FLEMING BROS. on the wrapper.

are not recommended as a remedy "for all the ills that flesh is heir to," but in affections of the liver, and in all Bilious Complaints, Dyspepsia and Sick Headache, or diseases of that character, they stand without a rival.

AGUE AND FEVER.

No better cathartic can be used preparatory to, or after taking Quinine.

As a simple purgative they are unequaled.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

The genuine are never sugar coated.

Each box has a red wax seal on the lid, with the impression DR. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS.

Each wrapper bears the signatures of C. McLANE and FLEMING BROS.

Insist upon having the genuine Dr. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS, prepared by Fleming Bros., of Pittsburgh, Pa., the market being full of imitations of the name McLane, spelled differently but same pronunciation.

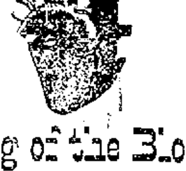
HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS

MALARIA IS AN UNSEEN VAPOROUS Poison, spreading disease and death in many localities, for which quinine is no genuine antidote, but for the effects of which Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is not only a thorough remedy, but a reliable preventive. To this fact there is an overwhelming array of testimony, extending over a period of thirty years. All disorders of the liver, stomach and bowels are also conquered by the Bitters.

For sale by all druggists and dealers generally. jy1



King of the Blood

Is not a "cure all," it is a blood-purifier and tonic. Impurity of blood poisons the system, deranges the circulation, and thus induces many disorders, known by different names to distinguish them according to effects, but being really branches or phases of that great generic disorder, Impurity of Blood. Such are Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Constipation, Nervous Disorders, Headache, Backache, General Weakness, Heart Disease, Dropsy, Kidney Disease, Piles, Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula, Skin Disorders, Pimples, Ulcers, Swellings, &c., &c. King of the Blood prevents and cures these by attacking the cause, Impurity of the Blood. Chemists and physicians agree in calling it "the most genuine and efficient preparation for the purpose." Sold by Druggists, $1 per bottle. See testimonials, directions, &c., in pamphlet, "Treatise on Diseases of the Blood," wrapped around each bottle.
